

IT Experts Share Ransomware Insights Following the Colonial Pipeline Attack

In a survey conducted by global IT association ISACA a week after the Colonial Pipeline attack, more than 1,200 IT risk, security and governance experts weighed in on ransomware attacks.

21% say their organizations have experienced ransomware attacks.

1:3 Fewer than one-third (32%) say their organizations are highly prepared for a ransomware attack.

67% say their organizations will take new precautions in light of the Colonial Pipeline attack.

78% say critical infrastructure organizations should not pay ransom if attacked.

1 in 5

say their organizations do not have contingencies in place if a vendor or supplier suffers a ransomware attack.

